RESIDENTIAL PROGRAMS
Some programs listed in this modality have dedicated capacity for those on AB109 county probation status, indicated with “AB109” in the Specialty Services column. Referrals may be handled one of two ways: (1) if the caller acknowledges they are on probation and are willing to let their Probation Officer know they are seeking treatment, they should be referred to their Probation Officer, who will refer them to Center Point for level of care assessment and placement. If they do not wish their PO to know they are seeking treatment, the screener may refer them directly to any of the programs listed in this modality. The screener should advise the caller that there are sometimes long waiting lists for non-AB109 funded beds, and that accepting a referral back to their Probation Officer, to Center Point and then to program will usually ensure immediate access to services.

This guide contains only those programs/agencies that are certified and/or licensed, or sober living programs that are registered with the CCAPP voluntary sober living certification, and only those agencies that hold contracts for services with Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services. BHCS regards pregnant women with substance use conditions as a special population needing priority access when seeking substance use treatment. BHCS provides an array of outpatient, intensive outpatient and residential treatment programs designed especially for pregnant women. In addition, BHCS is committed to providing priority access to pregnant women in its other substance use treatment programs that are co-ed or serve women only (Click the link below for translation).
